

CHOOSING AND DEVELOPING future farm managers is the focus of "Who Will Manage Your Farm Tomorrow." This conference provides farm families and their advisors critical information for helping the next generation find success on the farm and identifies effective management transfer strategies to implement.

Danny Klinefelter, Ph.D is the conference keynote speaker. Dr. Klinefelter is a Professor and Extension Economist with Texas AgriLife Extension and Texas A&M University and founder and former director of The Executive Program for Agricultural Producers (TEEPAP).

Our dinner speaker is author and consultant Andy Junkin, who will lead a discussion based on his book, "Farming with Family Ain't Always Easy". Junkin is passionate about evangelizing the need for farmers to rethink how they make decisions together in the context of operating and managing a family business.

Key Topics Include:

- Selecting & developing your successor
- Can your successor fill your shoes?
- Farming with family ain't always easy
- Risk management considerations for farm transfers
- Options for financing a farm business transfer
- Developing and implementing a plan for management transfer
- What worked for me
