Raising Your Bull Calves Can Add To Your Dairy Farm Profitability

If you are thinking about adding a new profitable enterprise to your dairy or beef operation, dairy beef production could be a natural fit.

If you would like to learn more about raising dairy beef, Cornell Cooperative Extension and JBS meat packers will be hosting this meeting at the Cooperative Extension Education Center in Albion to discuss the production and marketing of dairy beef.

Cornell University Beef Cattle Specialist, Dr. Mike Baker will discuss the beef cattle cycle, and rations that can be used when raising dairy beef.

CCE Livestock Specialist, Capital Area Agriculture and Horticulture Program, Tom Gallagher, will discuss vaccination programs for dairy steers and dairy beef quality assurance.

VP for Cattle Procurement at JBS, Larry Rose, from Greeley, Colorado, will give an overview of JBS, including information on a feedlot leased by JBS in Nicholville, NY, marketing dairy beef and risk management in regard to raising beef.

Please register for this program by December 2

Timely registration will guarantee a lunch.

There will be no charge to attend this educational event.
